PAPER by FREDERICK
WINGS O'BRIEN

INDEPENDENT Ethel Barrymore, in Denver, knocked her audience in, "A School for Scandal," for a row of birdies. Some said it was altitude (Denver is high), others illness. Ethel wrote in the paper that a "curtain of darkness seemed to hover about her." The papers said Ethel's old-fashioned curtsy was a cork-screw. Ethel said it was a strained ligament.

Ethel has temperament and great talent, and is of "The Royal Family." Her very handsome, gay father, Maurice Barrymore, I, often, saw on the stage, and, sometimes, on Broadway, when Fourteenth street was theatrical headquarters. Her brother, Lionel Barrymore, is one of the best actors on the stage or in the films; better than John, but without John's flair for publicity, without his rampant egotism.

§ §
FIFTEEN months before a Presidential election, the Washington wiseacres say: Hoover's moratorium adventure in Europe has given him a chance to bring about a new national psychology. If he betters unemployment decidedly, he has an even chance for reelection. If unemployment continues unabated, any Democrat will win. Hoover knows it, is casting about for means. He may be forced, as I have said months ago, to spend a billion or two for public works, to yield the veterans another billion or two, and to encourage a dole. He will do whatever he believes will help his political life. I would rather have him than Pinchot, an honest, dry, liberal, forceful politician, Governor of Pennsylvania; a Savonarola on a soap-box.

§ §
FROM time to time I have ridiculed the national advertisers, whose lying and stupid claims in print and on radio, are a laughing stock. Now, a weekly magazine, "Ballyhoo," published in New York, is devoted, solely, to making fun of these notable companies, their goods and slogans. The second number of "Ballyhoo" has sold two hundred fifty thousand copies. And, not strangely, the big advertisers seek to patronize it. It is like Hollywood, if an author will deride the squawkies, and the magnates, severely, and attract attention, the magnates will buy his book, employ him. "Ballyhoo" spares nobody.

VOL. IV NO. 22-4 CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA: TUESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1931 OFFICIAL PAPER 3c

No Protests Against Tax Valuations

Confidence in the ability and fairness of City Clerk and Assessor Saidee Van Brower was indicated yesterday in the complete absence of protests when the City Council met as a board of equalization as required annually by law. To provide taxpayers a fuller opportunity the Council will meet again today and tomorrow at ten o'clock to hear any protests which may be forthcoming. On Wednesday evening the Council will fix the tax rate for the ensuing year.

Total assessed valuation shown by Miss Van Brower is $3,511,535 divided:

Real Estate	$1,778,280.
Improvements	1,524,940.
Personal	208,315.

Exemptions allowable for military service reduce the taxable amount by $76,895.

Total assessed valuation last year was $3,371,425. New buildings in the business district account in large measure for this year's increase of approximately forty thousand dollars.

Aiding the Boy Scouts

Work on the Boy Scout House at Eighth and Mission is being accelerated so that it will be completed if possible by the opening date of the school term. The committee in charge still has a financial problem to solve; donations may be sent to Mr. L. H. Levinson.

M. J. Murphy, Inc., who received the general contract as lowest bidder, cut the amount of the contract price one hundred dollars as their contribution to the fund. Mr. Ed Burnham, who received the plumbing contract, also has made liberal allowance on the total cost. Dr. Amelia Gates donated a lot as a site for the house, but its use was protested on the score that it was located in a residential district. With Dr. Gates' permission the lot was then offered for sale and in the absence of a buyer was accepted by Messrs. Murphy at full valuation to apply on the building cost.

Frederick Preston Search in Recital Tonight

Carmel is known, and becoming more widely known, in musical centers of the country for the intelligently enthusiastic reception accorded visiting artists. Tonight it will have an opportunity to show what it can do for resident musicians, when Frederick Preston Search, 'cellist-composer, appears in recital at the Studio Theatre of the Golden Bough. Following is the program to be given, with Gordon Wilson at the piano:

School Bells in the Offing

Sunset School will open for the fall semester August thirty-first. Four of last year's teachers will be replaced and one addition made to the staff. Mrs. Daphne Scott will take charge of the opportunity room, where backward or otherwise irregular pupils will receive special attention. Mrs. Bernita Wineman have the third grade. Mrs. Anna Reis will conduct kindergarten classes. Work is being rushed on two of the new classrooms, as all of the rooms are not to be completed this year, to save extra expenditure.

Personalalia

Miss Ethel Barrymore, who has just finished a country-wide tour in "Scarlet Sister Mary" by Julia Peterkin, is spending this week at Del Monte.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Woody of Hollywood were staying at Del Monte this week end. Mrs. Woody is the screen actress, Helen Twelvetrees.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Cass were guests of Miss Maxine Cushing on Thirteenth and San Antonio this week end, returning to Palo Alto yesterday.

John Bacon, advertising manager of the short-lived and soon-to-be revived "Carmelesch-Nieuwsblad," left Monday for San Francisco. The contents of the paper had nothing to do with his departure.

Doctor Carl Hoops, professor of German literature at the University of Glasgow, on sabbatical leave, visited Mr. Fritz Wurzmann last week end. Mr.

Wurzmann also had as his guest Doctor and Mrs. Philip Petsch of the University of California at Los Angeles. The visitors were among the audience at "Beggar on Horseback" Sunday evening.

The two victims of automobile accidents in Carmel last week end, are reported to be improving steadily. Mr. Charles Cope, whose automobile went over an embankment at the Highlands Sunday, has suffered no serious effects. Miss Barbara Watson, who was hit by an automobile driven by Dave Austin, will leave Carmel Hospital Wednesday.

Miss Florence Dofson, who played opposite Galt Bell in "Beggar on Horseback," has left for Seattle, Washington, where she teaches school. While she was here, she visited her sister, Mrs. O. W. Bardarson, Dolores street. Mrs. Ruth Thompson, of the Fresno Little Theatre, will replace Miss Dofson in the role of Gladys in the week-end production of "Beggar on Horseback." The Fresno Theatre has produced many fine plays, and Mrs. Thompson has been leading lady there for several years.

Free Tickets to the Studio Theatre—A Contest

"Beggar on Horseback" has not yet had an adequate review. While the play was running the full story could not be told without ruining the surprise element; with repeat performances scheduled for this week-end the same restrictions hold. Bridging the gap, The Daily Carmelite will stage a mild and harmless contest—letting the public review the production in part.

The rules: Answers to the questions below have been filled in by Gloria Stuart, associated with the Studio Theatre and The Daily Carmelite. Fill in your answers to the questions and mail to Contest Editor, P. O. Box 1412.

Entries will be opened and time-stamped in order of receipt. The first set of answers coinciding with Gloria Stuart's selections will be awarded two tickets to next Saturday's performance. Only two tickets will be awarded; in case of ties, the first received will be the prize-winners; if no entry should exactly match selections already made, the closest approach will be given the prize. The tickets will be transferable, or at the winner's option may be used for the next production at the Studio Theatre. No member on The Daily Carmelite's staff will win the prize.

Here are the questions:

- (1) Character afforded the best acting opportunities by the book:
 - (a) Straight:
 - (b) Comedy:
- (2) Outstanding scene (not set):
 - (a) Principals:
 - (b) Extras (or group scene):
- (3) Best surprise touch:
- (4) Most effective set:
- (5) Best comedy touch:
- (6) Best single line:
- (7) Dialogue (if any) you would have cut:

(If you saw the show, enter please, whether or not you care for the prize offered. What is sought is an analysis of audience reaction based on individual expressions. Write name and address in marginal space.)

California Notes

(Succeeding "Kino Bay Notes," of which about four bushels remain unpublished through lack of space. Mr. Browne's "Kino Bay Notes" had a following—how large we do not know—but several genuine Kino Bay enthusiasts came to editorial attention. Those and others who wish to complete the chronicle of that Mexican Utopia may have access to the manuscript; Mr. Browne is too far ahead of us.—Ed.)

By PORTER EMERSON BROWNE

We were too ubiquitous for Mexico, so we came back to California. Santa Monica Notes seemed too localized so we are expanding to make it California Notes. If someone doesn't head us off, soon we will be writing United States Notes. And after that, World Notes. Why not? After all, haven't the scientists and the machinists made the world all one place? It isn't so long ago that Jules Verne had a wild flight of imagination and wrote "Around the World in Eighty Days." And now here my old pal, Russ Boardman, flies from Mass., to Turk., all in one day! When folks can do that, the world certainly has its feet in one another's laps.

Coming back to the States, from a quiet, peaceful country like Mexico makes the noise and confusion even more noticeable. Also our methods of treating folks like Al Capone. Here he's been allowed to make a joke out of Chicago, and Illinois, and until the U. S. suddenly found they could use the income tax law on him, he had even them buffaloed. And maybe still has. Years of time and thousands of dollars, and millions of cubic feet of gas, to fry one yegg. Mexico would have settled the problem in an hour at a gross cost of one firing squad and eighty cents for cartridges.

Russia would have done it even cheaper. One Chinaman with a club. Which is why I begin to be a mite dubious about our boasted greatness. We know we're great. But we're certainly having a time making other folks believe it.

Old Jim Blevins writes: "If you can't come back to Costa Rica, send someone else." We're trying to, old timer. We're sure trying to.

CARMEL TRAFFIC CONDITIONS

To the Editor of The Daily Carmelite:
The impunity with which local traffic regulations are being violated is a matter for grave concern.

There are two types of violators: First, local residents, who assume that because they live here they are exempt from the provisions as to double parking, over-time parking and who park in non-parking areas, as well as exceeding the speed limit in the residence districts.

The second type of violators is divided into two groups: First, those who are ignorant of local regulations but conform when their errors are pointed out. Second, those who come here with the idea that they can get away with anything in Carmel, from traffic violations to wild parties.

Were I disposed to I could give names, dates and nature of law violations. I shall not do so, but I would like to mention that a certain local professional man daily travels through our streets at the rate of sixty miles an hour.

A few jail sentences and heavy fines will stop some of this law-breaking business.

Yours respectfully,

An Old Resident

CARD PARTY AND RECEPTION AT SERRA-CRESPI HALL

Catholic women of the Peninsula are working toward the successful opening of the Serra Crespi recreation hall on the Carmel Mission grounds. They met Sunday morning after mass to make final arrangements for the Thursday afternoon reception, and the benefit card party to be given next Sunday evening. The Reverend Monseigneur Scher of Monterey presided.

Mrs. H. L. Watson and Mrs. James Hooper were appointed on the reception committee for Thursday evening; Miss Ellen O'Sullivan to be in charge of refreshments. On Sunday Mrs. L. S. Slevin will have charge of the reception committee, Mrs. J. McGury of the prizes (which Mrs. A. Bullock Webster has donated), and Mrs. Evans Achison will serve refreshments.

N. A. EXHIBIT

An exhibit of paintings by William Ritachel, Armin Hansen, Paul Dougherty and Arthur Hill Gilbert, under auspices of the Carmel Art Association, opened with a reception at the Denny-Watrous Gallery last night. Representative work of the four men, who are members of the National Academy, will remain on the Gallery walls until August twenty-fourth. The exhibit will be reviewed in an early issue.

BUSINESS NOTES

The Corner Cupboard has just received a consignment of distinctive pottery from England. The first group is composed of children's dishes, and is designed by two well-known artists, Mabel Lucie Atwell and Hilda Cowham. These two women have been concerned with children's articles for many years, making up cards and books and toys. These dishes are vividly colored, each one containing an original verse to match the picture on the plate.

There is a new shop in keeping with the high standard of Carmel shops now open on Ocean avenue east of San Carlos street. The Mission Shoe Service store, operated by Mr. W. F. Thompson, has new and modern equipment to do all kinds of repairing. It is a light, clean shop with many conveniences, such as ottomans for patrons who are being served as they wait. Mr. Thompson reports a very satisfactory patronage in the five days that he has been opened.

REAL ESTATE DEVELOPMENT

The Arthur T. Shand real estate office is engaged now in building fire trails through their tract on the east side of the Monterey highway. This property has many of its roads already laid, and Mr. Shand and his associates are experimenting with a new kind of road surfacing which they will eventually use over the whole tract.

POLICE COURT

Sometimes dormant for weeks on end, Carmel's police court yesterday bustled with activity: two cases on the docket. H. G. Henderson arraigned before City Judge Hoagland yesterday morning on a charge of selling liquor, asked for a jury trial and time to engage a lawyer. August seventeenth was set as the date of hearing.

Dave Austin, colored, driver of the car involved in an accident at Dolores and Ocean Sunday evening, was brought before Judge Hoagland yesterday afternoon for preliminary investigation. Eye-witness statements were received preparatory to framing a charge, and the case continued.
